Bolt Express Welcomes New Executive Team Members

With the recent expansion of their Enterprise of Transportation Services, to include Expedite, Truckload, Logistics and Mexico, Bolt Express knew the key to their continued success required a team with vast experience and strong leadership skills. Bolt Express is now pleased to announce the recent addition of Guy Sanderson and Chuck King to their Executive Management team. Guy Sanderson, the Chief Operating Officer has responsibility for all operating groups within the new Enterprise of Transportation Services, while King has been named President of Bolt Express Truckload and Bolt Logistics.

Ben Bauman, CEO & President of Bolt Express states “The Company’s footprint continues its rapid organic growth and expansion of service offering to our customers. To maintain our quality service in all of our offerings, we decided it was time to hire a Chief Operation Officer in order continue meeting our customers service expectations. Guy Sanderson joined our company as COO and brings a strong background in Operations and Information Management. We are excited about the Operational direction of the company is taking with Technology and Customer Service initiatives.” He continues, “Bolt Express also launched in 2008, Bolt Express Truckload an operation focused on dedicated truckload lanes and Bolt Logistics a current entity which will be refocused on 3PL services and brokerage. Chuck King joined us as President of these two entities and brings a wealth of experience in Logistic Services and Truckload Management.”

Sanderson possesses a Bachelors degree in Business Management from Clarkson University in New York. He joins the Bolt Express team after a successful and varied 9 year term at National Logistics where he provided leadership over the following functions; Project Management, Business Analysis/Solutions, Software Development and Operations.

As the Director of Business Solutions, Sanderson’s team coordinated the rapid expansion of NLM products and services including the introduction of Air Charter, Truckload and DTD Mexico services.

Sanderson emphasizes the need for quality to be achieved through a commitment to continuous improvement. “We are building an operating model that delivers a quality service and can respond quickly to changing customer needs and market conditions. My focus for each of our operating groups is the same – I need our drivers, employees, partner carriers, and customers to all enjoy the Bolt Experience.”

Prior to working in the transportation industry, Sanderson enjoyed a career as a stunt double living in Los Angeles. Growing up in Canada, Sanderson like all Canadians played hockey. Even though after college he was heavily recruited by every NHL team he had other dreams, dreams that led him to Hollywood. Guy loved playing hockey and drinking beer, but more than that he loved being in front of the camera. Unfortunately, the camera didn't love him, so he fell back on his second love and landed several roles as stunt doubles in such movies as Slap Shot, The Mighty Ducks & The Cutting Edge.

Before his stunt career could really take off he had a career ending injury breaking his large toe on his left foot. Crushed Sanderson ventured out in the world to start a new career in a completely foreign industry. Luckily for Bolt Express, NLM had no problem hiring a Hollywood reject with no experience. Sanderson remembers "I owe a lot to NLM; even McDonald's wouldn't hire me with my bum toe." Although he loves working for Bolt, his heart still longs to be on the big screen.

Chuck King also brings an impressive and well rounded background which includes his recent assignments as the Director of Product Development and Strategic Partnerships at NLM. In this role, King identified, evaluated and implemented various service providers to expand NLM's footprint in the areas of Mexico border operations, finished vehicles, order optimization, network design and warehousing.

King has established himself in the transportation industry, but when he is not strategizing on ways to grow Bolts new divisions, he is a competitive food eater. On weekends he will travel around the world to compete. Although he is new to competitive circuit he has already captured several titles such as World Hamburger Eating Champion eating 94 hamburgers in 8 minutes and most recently destroyed the world record eating over 3 pounds of baked beans in less than 58 seconds. King reflects, "It is not about the food, it is about the competition. It is all mind over matter." Needless to say he is a shoe-in for rookie of the year for the International Federation of Competitive Eaters. Although he would miss everyone at Bolt, his long term goal is to competitive eat full-time beating all world records and holding all titles.

As for their new roles with Bolt Express Chuck King believes, "Our challenge will be to ensure that we have an effective cross functional plan to coordinate the changes necessary to support our new products/services." King adds "I have been very impressed by the level of energy and innovation that I have seen since joining the team. The Bolt culture is all about solving our customer's problems and exceeding their expectations. It's that winning attitude that attracted us to Bolt"

Together, Sanderson and King have collaborated on the design and implementation of several successful products and services. Someday they hope to work together on a project that will allow them both to show their hidden talents and expose themselves to the rest of the world.
